

5.2 Access to components

Most Terminology services depend on the ability to efficiently access information about the set of components in a selected snapshot view . The following sections outline the types of information that need to be accessible and provide illustration of some of the common patterns of data access that are required. The illustrations are expressed as SQL queries based on the example relational representation and dynamic snapshot views approaches discussed in earlier sections.