

SNOMED Content Request Service Go Live

We are happy to announce that the SNOMED CT Content Request Service (CRS) goes live tomorrow, 27th September. This new service replaces the previous SIRS system that was used to allow the community to submit requests for changes to existing content or new content. The new service provides tighter integration with our authoring platform, which will make the request process more efficient all round. It will also provide more flexibility for reporting based on user requirements. Thank you very much for those who have provided feedback during testing.

Some of you will have previously used SIRS, and you only need to use your current Confluence accounts to access the service, where you will find all of your data migrated from SIRS. In the same way that SIRS operated, the new service is not an open service as yet, and if you do not have yet have access to the service, please get in touch with techsupport@ihtsdo.org to enquire about getting an account.

The new service can be found here - <http://snomed.org/crs>.

A user guide can be found here - CRS User Guide.

There will be three webinars to provide an introduction to the new service at the following times (hopefully, there should be enough opportunities for attendance, recordings will be made available either way):

27 Sep 2016 at 20h00 UTC

28 Sep 2016 at 13h00 UTC

29 Sep 2016 at 06h00 UTC

The GoToMeeting details are as follows:

1. Please join my meeting.
